

Lord of the rings

A peaceful Hobbit, is satisfied living in the remote corner of Middle earth, is now given a challenging quest to destroy the one ring to prevent the evil forces grasping the ring. This is Frodo's quest in J.J.R Tolkien's famous novel Lord of the rings. When Frodo inherits the ring he now stands with the fate of the world in his hands. The ring is forged by the dark lord Sauron and contains dangerous powers. Frodo is accompanied by the wizard Gandalf on a dangerous quest towards Mordor to destroy the ring. The hobbit is a small and brave creature, Frodo is accompanied by his three friends on the journey through troublesome mountains howling rivers and mystical worlds, an all ways followed by Sauron's black knights.

After four years of work, Tolkien's fantastic novel (tales) can at last be seen in the Cinema. Tolkien's trilogy has been brought to life by the movie director Peter Jackson, who recreated the three books magical world in his home country New Zealand as the background. The work of the backdrop and costumes where carefully done, and most of the original dialog from the books where kept. The recording of the three movies are completed and the movies will air in the cinema in 2001, 2002 and 2003. It is said that the cost of the complete project was around 300 million dollars.
